The New Cabinet is Named.

A British Schooner is Wrecked and Sinks With Its Crew Into the Sea.

Personnel of M. De Freycinet, the Prime Minister of the New French Council.

THE FRENCH MINISTRY.

List of the New Grevy Cabinet as Reorganized.

By Cable to THE SENTINEL.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The new cabinet was announced in the Official Gazette yesterday afternoon. It is as follows:

M. De Freycinet, president of the council and minister of foreign affairs.
M. Sarrien, minister of the interior.
M. Sadi Carnot, minister of finance.
M. Goblet, minister of public instruction.

M. De Mole, minister of justice.
M. De Velle, minister of agriculture.
General Boulanger, minister of war.
M. Auber, minister of marine and the colonies.

M. Barhaut, minister of public works.
M. Granet, minister of posts and telegraphs.

There is a disposition to give the cabinet a fair trial, but it is predicted it cannot last long.

PRIME MINISTER OF FRANCE.

Whether M. de Freycinet would succeed M. Brisson was a greater question in France almost than whether M. Grevy should succeed himself. It is the ministry that reflects the power in politics, and it is to this office that the Frenchman gives most attention.

The average duration of the eighteen governments the country has had in the last three centuries is sixteen years. The present republic has lasted fourteen. At the beginning of 1855 Jules Ferry was prime minister. He was succeeded during the year by M. Brisson, who was president of the chamber of deputies, but consented to "form a cabinet," as it is called, on the downfall of Jules Ferry. He lost his popularity from that time steadily. The French consider the war in Tonquin not to have been managed with the highest degree of statesmanship, therefore M. Brisson resigned. The truth is, with a giant debt and masses of unemployed workmen staring them in the face, matters are in such a tangle that nobody quite likes to take hold of it.

M. Brisson is a brilliant man, 51 years old, formerly a prominent newspaper writer. He belongs to what is called the "extreme left," or radical party, in French politics. His brief premiership has been passed in storm and vexation, and he is weary of it. His health is broken down besides, and a year's absolute rest from politics is necessary to restore him. M. Brisson would have done better to resign.

M. DE FREYCINET.

M. de Freycinet was called upon to form a new ministry when M. Brisson resigned. He has been a member of several cabinets, and is now minister of foreign affairs. He is one of the foremost advocates in France of a liberal colonial policy, and was largely instrumental in forwarding the operations in Tonquin and Madagascar that have cost France so heavily in lives and treasure. He is by profession a civil engineer, and served the government in a number of important scientific operations before he began his political career.

In 1870, when M. Grevy had succeeded Marshal MacMahon as president of the republic, M. Freycinet was appointed president of the council in place of M. Waddington, and he took the portfolio of foreign affairs. He resigned in 1880, in consequence of the difficulties relative to the execution of the degrees against the unauthorized religious orders; and M. Jules Ferry was then entrusted with the formation of a new cabinet. In January, 1882, M. Gambetta's ministry was overthrown on the scrutiny de liste proposal, by a majority in the chamber of 395 to 110. M. de Freycinet was then recalled to power, and again held, with the presidency of the council, the portfolio of foreign affairs. Such are the changes in France.

THE PRESIDENT OF FRANCE.

Presidential elections in our sister republic across the water are managed differently from ours. There is no body of presidential electors to be voted for by the people at large. The chief executive is elected by the French national assembly. It is composed of two houses, like our congress, a senate and chamber of deputies. It is amusing to know that, so far from holding their sessions in one building, the French senate and chamber of deputies meet at different ends of the town. This is approved on the ground that it prevents quarreling. There must be something in this judging from the disgraceful rows at the recent presidential election.

The election took place at Versailles, which may be called the acting capital of France. For another seven years the gray-bearded man in the picture will be the scapegoat who must bear the sins of the French people. It is not much fun being president of France. Ordinary elections in France take place on Sunday.

The French are excitable by nature. The quantities of absinthe, vermouth and drugged brandy that most of the men are in the habit of swallowing do not tend to soothe this nature. The future of the brave Republique Francaise looks uncertain. Since the house of Bourbon began to reign France has had eighteen different governments. The debt of the country has increased of late years. The people of the United States can only hope with all their hearts that the sister republic may weather the storms that seem approaching.

M. Jules Grevy, now re-elected for a second term of seven years, is the third president of the third republic. The first president was Thiers, the diplomat and litterateur, and the second MacMahon, the soldier. This was the result, not so much of any special merit of his past regime as of the necessity under the present anomalous condition of parties and affairs in France, of having a "safe man" at the helm of state.

M. JULES GREVY.

M. Grevy was born at Mont-sous-Vaudrey, in the Jura mountains, in 1813. He was a student in the Paris law schools when the revolution of 1830 broke out, and although but seventeen years of age, he fought in the war of the insurrectionists and did not lay down his musket until Charles X abdicated. It is difficult to believe that the hot-blooded boy who, musket in hand, was the first to force his way into the barracks of the Rue de Babylon is identical with the staid old gentleman in the long black coat who may be seen taking his daily walk in the streets of Paris. Having finished his studies, M. Grevy was admitted to the bar, and soon became prominent by defending people who were prosecuted for holding liberal opinions under the regime of Louis Philippe. During the revolution of 1848 M. Grevy came to the front again and won respect by his prudence and self-possession in keeping abreast with the Liberals, while avoiding the extravagances of the more hot-headed visionaries.

When the empire came, M. Grevy, like the majority of those holding liberal opinions, retired to private life, and did not appear again until toward the end of the Napoleonic regime, when the current of liberalism burst forth anew. He was an Opposition member of the corps legislatif when the war with Germany broke out, and he opposed that disastrous movement with all his strength. He was elected to the national assembly, which succeeded in the imperial legislature, and was chosen president of the assembly, a post of exceeding difficulty at that stormy period. He was re-elected a number of times, until finally made president of the republic in 1873.

M. Grevy is of medium height, broad-shouldered, solid and a trifle phlegmatic. He is affable toward all, the high and the humble alike, and gives as cordial a welcome to an obscure workman as to a foreign ambassador. He generally dresses in coarse woolen clothes, which are sometimes too large for him and never made in the prevailing style. When he walks out he wears a black frock coat, which seems designed more for comfort than ornament. On state occasions he puts on the conventional white necktie and black swallow-tail coat, and seems miserable until he can put them off again. During his career M. Grevy has always refused decorations—one of the weaknesses of his countrymen—but when he became president of the republic that office carried with it the grand cross—highest grade—of the Legion of Honor.

WERE THEY MASONS.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—Some one having signed "Jefferson Davis" to a paragraph saying that Benedict Arnold and Aaron Burr learned and plotted treason in the Masonic lodges and died in good and regular standing and Davis who led the great rebellion against the government lost no prestige as a Mason; thereby but received pardon largely on that account. Mr. Davis wrote the Col. J. L. Power, of Macon, Miss., saying he never was a Free and Accepted Mason and never asked or been granted a pardon.

The movement of the Pennsylvania people toward better educating men in service in the various departments of the company promises to become more general. As yet very little has been done to place within the reach of the railroad mechanic the proper means for practical instruction which will fit him for his life-work.

A Post Office Robbed.

Capt. Hugh M. Diehl received this dispatch this morning.

CONNEERSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 8, 1885. Stolen last night, from postoffice, by drilling safe, $150 in money, two checks drawn by P. H. and T. M. Roote, one for $22 and the other for $16.50, also $40 in postage stamps.

J. M. Mossey.

Captain Diehl is also asked to arrest a one-legged tramp, who shot a man at Chicago. The fellow is believed to have come this way, and Captain Diehl is working on the matter to-day.

WILLIAM WARREN tells a delicious story about a St. Louis man who went East last summer and hunted up the poet Whittier. He found the quiet old Quaker poet trying to hide from civilization in a farmhouse near Nahant. He had gone there to escape just such bores as the St. Louis man was. At first he declined to see the visitor, saying that he was not feeling strong, but the Missouri man was so persistent that at last Whittier yielded and he was admitted. He pounced upon the poet and nearly shook his arm from the socket. He declared that he adored the poet's works—in fact, he read nothing else. He asked Whittier to write his name a few hundred times on a sheet of note paper that he might distribute the autographs among his friends, and it was all the poet could do to keep the impetuous visitor from cutting the buttons from his coat to carry away as mementos. "And all the time," said Whittier, pathetically, as he recounted his adventure, "he called me Whittaker."

CONGRESS.

The Senate Struggles Alone To-day.

Senator Voorhees' Pension Resolution Laid Over to Suit Mr. Harrison.

Harrison.

WASHINGTON.

Full Proceedings in Both Houses To-day.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Mr. Enstis offered concurrent resolution in the senate that in the opinion of congress the bonds to be called in February first should be paid in silver dollars, such payment being in strict compliance with the existing law and in aid of the financial policy established by the legislation of congress. Enstis desired the resolution referred to the committee on finance and expressed the hope that the committee would report early.

The senate agreed that when it should adjourn to-day, it should be until Monday next.

Mr. Voorhees' resolution of inquiry relating to the pension office was with his consent allowed to go over until Monday next, with a view that a resolution of like import be drafted acceptable to both Mr. Voorhees and Mr. Harrison.

The following are among the measures introduced in the senate to-day:

By Logan, to increase the pensions of persons who lost one eye to $25 per month, the difference between that rate and $4 per month, the amount now allowed, to be paid such pensioners from July 1, 1877, to the date of the passage of the act.

By Hale—To prevent the letting of government contracts to persons who employ convict labor.

By Wilson—To establish a postal telegraph system.

The Utah bill was taken up and its consideration proceeded with. Mr. Edmunds created some merriment on rising to speak on one of the amendments offered yesterday. Looking about him, and finding comparatively few republicans in their seats, he said: "As hardly any friends of human liberty are in the senate, I will address myself to the reform men."

After some debate Mr. Brown's amendment offered yesterday which was to strike out the words that would compel the lawful husband or wife of the accused to testify, was rejected, yeas 11, nays 42.

QUITE RECHERCHE.

A Very Gay Sextet Bow to His Honor and Spicy Tales of Their Capers Are Told.

The police affairs have been calm this week, but this morning matters looked up a little. Last night Officer Humbrecht arrested Eva Baker and Mrs. Durnell, for drunkenness. Miss Baker is of a good Monroeville family and a sister of Mrs. John Dratt. Mrs. Mary Durnell is the wife of Pittsburg Engineer Harmon Durnell. The women were in their "cups" and rather too loud to suit the virtuous officer. John Dratt bailed the women out and the money was forfeited.

Dave Walters and Charley Green and Ella Park and Annie Neal, two Fleming House maids, were seated in front of his honor. The people were out to a dance last night and returning home at 3 o'clock this morning they stopped into Dave Walter's laboratory, the little cottage on Clinton street, on the Graham property. They were there but a short time, when Officers O'Connell and Humbrecht tapped for admittance. It was denied and the peepers smashed the door in and placed the people under arrest. They gave bail and demanded a trial this morning. They assert there was nothing wrong in their action and their attorney fought it out on that line.

Mayor Muhler has the last cases under consideration, and the principals are determined on knowing whether an officer can break down a door without a warrant.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

How the Supplications are Directed.

The union of the churches during the week of prayer has been highly beneficial and a source of spiritual profit in years past, and therefore by previous arrangement at the ministers' meeting a week ago, it was concluded to carry out the usual program laid down by the Evangelical Alliance. The services will be held in the lecture room of the First Presbyterian church this week, beginning on Monday, Jan. 4, at 2 o'clock and will continue each day at the same hour. The following topics, with leaders' names and dates, are given for reference and ready access:

The prayers to-day were devoted to nations and governments.—For rulers and all in authority; for the spread of justice and peace; for the defeat of malicious plots and conspiracies; for the manifestation of a christian spirit before removal of all race and sectional prejudices; for the abolition of traffic in slaves, opium and intoxicating drinks, and all other immoral trades and practices; for a favorable reception of christian missionaries by heathen rulers and peoples; and for the coming of Christ in the kingdom.—I Tim. ii, 16. Psa. xi. II Tim. iii, II Thess. ii. Psa. lxxix. Rom. xii, 1-3. Psa. xxix. Matt. xxiv, 29-31.

Prayers to-morrow will be directed to Christian life—for increase of faith, hope and charity; for the deepening of our spiritual life in Christ, and such conformity to Him as may fit us for being more useful for our Saviour's glory; for more love to the Bible; for the better observance of the Lord's day and of family worship; for the success of efforts to prevent or cure intemperance; to relieve the sick and to rescue the perishing; for benevolent institutions and Christian work of all kinds.—Eph. i, 15-33; Matt. vi. 1; Cor. xiii; Phil. ii, 1-16 and iv, 1-3; Rom. xii; James i.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Temple management offer a splendid card to-morrow night. It is "A Pair of Kids" by Ezra Kendall. Mr. Kendall appears in the cast supported by the C. D. Heas Comedy company. Acts from popular operas are rendered and Mr. Kendall does some very clever business. The Dubuque Herald says: "There is no particular plot to the play of 'A Pair of Kids,' and the motive of the writer seems to have been to excite merriment, in which he has been eminently successful. For more than three straight hours the audience last night sat and roared, stamped their feet, clapped their hands, and laughed until their sides were sore at the genuinely funny things presented by the company."

Your Athlophoros has astonished me with its wonderful power. I have used two bottles for an attack of inflammatory rheumatism and find it the best investment I ever made. Geo. A. Crandale, Second and Walnut streets, Des Moines, Iowa.

They are Not Sorry.

There is one thing nobody ever regrets—that is, the day they first adopted Parker's Tonic as their regular family medicine. Its range is so wide, and its good effects so sure, that nothing else, except good nursing, are needed in a great majority of cases. Buy it, try it, and afterwards it will not require any praise from us.

GUARDING A "ROLLER COASTER."

La Fayette's new "roller coaster" at Linwood Park has a vigilant night watchman in ex-Policeman John McGrath, who is careful to see that no daring spirits take surreptitious rides upon the coaster during the hours of darkness, and who is himself a most fearless and gallant rider. Mr. McGrath is a hearty looking man, but yet has had occasion to lament the fact that "a policeman's lot is not a happy one." The truth is Mr. McGrath has suffered from the distressing complaint—rheumatism, but he is no longer afflicted with it. Athlophoros cured him and he is now as well able to chase down any evil-doer and land him behind bolts and bars as he ever was. Being asked as to his rheumatism and cure Mr. McGrath gave this account:

"I was taken with a severe attack of rheumatism in the hip. I suffered much pain and was obliged to quit work entirely. I was helpless so far as walking was concerned and was confined to my bed for six weeks. In my efforts to get relief I used many kinds of medicines and liniments, but they failed to make any change for the better. After trying so many kinds of medicines I was very loath to experiment with any new remedy, but seeing Athlophoros recommended so highly I purchased a bottle. After using the one bottle I was entirely well and able to go to work. I had any return of the pains since? None whatever. I have not lost a day's work since."

Mr. W. B. King, the dealer in sewing machines at the corner of Fifth and Columbia streets, has had an equally satisfactory experience with Athlophoros in curing rheumatism.

"It was magical in its effects upon me," he says. "I was first taken with pain in the soles of my feet and in a few hours was not able to walk at all. The rapidity with which the disease spread over my whole system was wonderful. Every bone, muscle and joint in my body gave me the most intense pain. My arms were both drawn up, and I could not walk or sleep. I suffered in this way for many weeks. Finally, by the persuasion of a friend who knew of Athlophoros, I was induced to try it. I had taken but a few doses when I had very decided relief. I continued taking the medicine until I had used six bottles, and I have not had a pain of rheumatism since."

Still another resident of La Fayette, Ind., who has used the wonderful remedy with the happiest results is Mrs. A. E. Sherman, of No. 159 Main street, who suffered so severely with sciatic rheumatism that at times she could not walk.

"I tried every kind of liniment, besides many medicines," says Mrs. Sherman, "but could get no relief. I finally said: 'Well, I am going to try this Athlophoros; it is spoken of very highly.' After using about three-quarters of a bottle I began to experience relief. I used about three bottles and have not had any pain since. My mother, Mrs. Lavin, who lives with me, is now seventy-seven years old, and for about five years was badly crippled with rheumatism. She was much worse than I; in fact, at one time we thought she would never get well, and more as an experiment than anything else I gave her a quarter of a bottle of Athlophoros. She got some relief even with that small amount and continued using it to the extent of four bottles. She does not have any pain now, but still has some stiffness in her joints."

If you cannot get your drug or grocer, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if you can't, it does not be purchased to try something else, but order at once from us, directed Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall Street, New York.

Benson's Caprine Plasters are widely imitated. That is the fact. Now, why are they imitated? Because they are the only plaster in existence that is really trustworthy and valuable. Benson's Plasters are highly and scientifically medicated, and cure in a few hours ailments upon which no others had any effect whatever. The public are therefore cautioned against plasters bearing the names of "Caplain," or "Capitum," or "Capitine," or "Capitum," which are meant to pass for "Caprine" (please note the difference) and also against Benson's Plasters, which are meant to pass for Benson's Plasters. When buying, ask distinctly for Benson's Plasters and insist upon seeing a personal examination. The genuine has the word "Caprine" cut or pressed in the body of the plaster and the "Three Seals" trademark on the face cloth.

OFFICIAL PAPER COUNTY AND CITY.

FRIDAY, JAN. 8, 1886.

The saloon license in Kendallville is $75.

The soldiers' monument at Kokomo will be erected in Crown Point cemetery instead of in the court house yard.

STATE TREASURER COOPER reports a balance in the treasury of $484,499.16. But a few days ago the Gazette reported the state treasury as empty.

COL. RUEL M. JOHNSON, a prominent lawyer of Goshen, has been appointed clerk of the supreme court of Mexico, of which Judge E. V. Long is chief justice.

The commissioners of Noble county think the county farm too large, and advertise to sell a part of it. The superintendent of the county infirmary gets a salary of $750.

The communication of a prominent democrat, in last Monday's SENTINEL, "knocked the Gazette out in the first round," so to speak. The Gazette has been replying in sections and with so little degree of success that its language betokens despair.

WILLIAM H. BRIANT's silence is golden and establishes the truth of the statement that every penny of the people's money was honestly expended to improve the country. The SENTINEL demands evidence of wrong before it believes anything the republican press may charge.

DOORKEEPER CANADAY, of the senate, is charged with failure to keep a promise made to Vice President Hendricks, to give the son of Marshall C. Woods, of Indianapolis, a place. The boy is in the office of the supervising architect of the treasury at present, but his place is wanted.

Now that Ohio has abolished October elections, Gov. Hoadley wisely recommends the additional reform of dispensing with annual elections. He cites Indiana as proof that an election every two years is sufficient to prevent the average voter from becoming "rusty" in politics.

"KENDALLVILLE being easy of access and central, it should be selected as the place to hold the democratic congressional convention," says the Kendallville News. Why not hold the convention at Fort Wayne where there are facilities to entertain a crowd, besides Fort Wayne can be reached by rail without change of cars from every county in the district.

PROFESSOR RICE, of Wesleyan University, in a recent lecture, told of a freshet at one time when the Connecticut River was fifteen miles wide at Hartford and two hundred feet deep at Middletown. The mountains between the latter city and Meriden were islands in the river that ran to the sound in two channels, the new one running over the Wallingford plains in New Haven.

The Andrews Express office was yesterday removed to Huntington and consolidated with the Huntington News. Thad Butler, of the Express, retains editorial control of the consolidated journal, which will be known as the News-Express. It is said that a local newspaper, to succeed the Express, will be established at Andrews about February 1. The Advertiser is the name of a new weekly publication which has been begun at Wabash by John R. Polk. It is supposed to be the organ of the local lodge of Knights of Labor.

SOMEBODY started a newspaper story to the effect that Keppler, of Puck, had applied to President Cleveland for a position for a relative, and had been snubbed. There upon Keppler wrote a letter to the president, asking as a favor that he deny the story. This Cleveland did, and then he truly moralized as follows: "I don't think there ever was a time when newspaper lying was so general and so mean as at present, and there never was a country under the sun where it flourished as it does in this. The falsehoods daily spread before the people in our newspapers, while proof of the mental ingenuity of those engaged in newspaper work, are insults to the American love for decency and fair play of which we boast."

It is said that wildcats of enormous size still haunt the back country towns of Connecticut. In East Lyme they dart up trees about the farm houses at night, snatch a fat turkey, and make off with it easily. In Bozrah the other day a big cat killed a full-grown sheep and had partly eaten it before the farmer could get his gun. Hunting parties frequently get on the track of the animals, but have not got a shot at one as yet. Last year several wildcats were killed in East Lyme and on the western border of Salem.

EXPERTS who, with pick and spade, have scratched the rough crust of the earth on the line of the Blue Ridge, in the county of Rockbridge, Virginia, report the discovery of most valuable veins of tin ore. This tin ore is large, and many tracts of land have lately been bonded to miners, but the best veins appear to be along the waters of Irish Creek, in the northeastern corner of the county. The veins are generally less than a foot thick, but some are three or four feet thick, and the tin stone occurs in crystals, in nodules, and in strings.

AS ALMOST every member of the English Cabinet is a peer or relative of one, it may be interesting to see what peers and their relatives have received from the State between 1859 and 1884. Dukes, £9,700,000; marquises, £8,305,950; earls, £48,181,202. These are large sums and no 10,000 families of those who are not peers have received one-hundredth part of the amount. It may be an excellent plan that the executive should be in the hands of the aristocracy, but cheap it is not. These Drahmins know how to take care of themselves and their relatives.

A curious change has come over Mr. Roscoe Conkling's personal appearance within the last year or two. He used to be very particular about his dress. His clothing was always fashionably out, and was made of expensive and elegant materials. He wears a Derby hat which age has withered and custom staled, and generally a suit of dark-blue cloth which is almost big enough to fit David Davis. Mr. Conkling carries under his arm a large, thick stick. He seems to have developed lately a marked tendency to solitude. He is rarely seen with anybody as he goes along through the streets with his eyes fixed on the sidewalk ten or fifteen feet in front of him.

WILLIAM J. SMYTHE, an old attaché of the New York Herald, died recently. A few years ago, when Bennett contemplated starting a newspaper in London which should smash the British "Thunderer," he telegraphed Smythe to meet him in London at the Langham. Smythe started at once, but failed to find his employer there. After waiting a month he wrote to Bennett, who was roving around the Continent, asking him for orders and mildly suggesting at the close of the letter that staying at the Langham was expensive business. Bennett telegraphed back from Dresden: "Who in hell is paying for this? Wait." And Smythe waited. Bennett gave up his plan and Smythe returned to America.

PRINCE ALEXANDER'S life, especially now, is one of almost uninterrupted work. From 9 in the morning until midday he receives his ministers; in the afternoon military matters are discussed, and seldom are the evenings free for recreation. At the court of Prince Alexander, if court it can be termed, there is neither the etiquette of the east nor of the west. It is simply a military society, where ceremony is little thought of and admission is easily to be obtained. As there is no aristocracy among the Slav people of the Balkans, there is no mark of distinction beyond the possession of a greater or lesser store of roubles. Consequently, every Bulgarian has a right of free speech with his ruler, and this right he is fond of using. There is one drawback to it—the want of personal cleanliness on the part of his loyal subjects.

The ladies of Japan show not less readiness to adopt Western ideas and usages than the Japanese of the other sex. The belles of Yeddo order dresses from Paris, and the progress of imitation has gone so far as to make a knowledge of the fashionable dances of Europe an indispensable feature in the education of every Japanese lady who respects herself. A riding school is about to be opened in Yokohama exclusively for the use of native ladies, and it promises to be largely patronized. The Japanese Government is about to take a step which will have the effect of bringing the more solid branches of Western education within reach of the female subjects of the Mikado. A number of young women are about to be sent to Europe to receive a thorough training in the essential branches of female education as it is understood there, with a view to their subsequent employment as teachers in their own country when qualified.

"100 doses one dollar" is true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it is an unanswerable argument as to strength and economy.

MISS CAMERINE RAE explained, in a recent chat-chat on science, in Aberdeen, over the sea, the way in which she got a dog, within three weeks, to ring a bell. She began by letting "Tiny" smell the bone of a mutton chop, and then tied the bone to the string of the bell. At first "Tiny" was in a great tremor, but by taking her very kindly and stroking her, she found that she could induce her to pull at the bone, and so ring the bell. After that she tied a small piece of wood to the string, but the dog would not pull it. At last she pulled her gently back until the bell rang, and in this way, in the short course of three weeks, with not more than one or two lessons a day, the dog would go and ring the bell by being told: "Tiny, go and ring the bell." At the end of three weeks she gave an evening party, and during the evening they were all electrified by the sudden and violent ringing of the bell. "Tiny" had been neglected to be indulged with any tid-bit, and had taken this means of receiving attention.

CONTAGIOUS

Diseases are prevalent all over the world.

I am a native of England, and while I was in that country I contracted a terrible blood poison, and for two years was under treatment as an out-door patient at Nottingham Hospital, England, but was not cured. I suffered the most agonizing pains in my bones, and was covered with sores all over my body and limbs. I had vertigo and dizziness, with partial loss of sight, severe pains in my head and eyes, etc., which nearly ran me crazy. I lost all hope in that country, and sailed for America, and was treated at Roosevelt in this city, as well as by a prominent physician in New York having no connection with the hospital. I saw the advertisement of Swift's Specific, and I determined to give it a trial as a last resort. I had given up all hope of being cured, as I had gone through the hands of the medical men in Nottingham and New York. I took six bottles of S. S. S. and I can say with great joy that they have cured me entirely. I am as sound and well as I ever was in my life. L. FRED HALFORD. New York City, June 12, 1885.

BLOOD

Is the life, and he is wise who remembers it. But in March of last year (1884), I contracted blood poison, and being in Savannah, Ga., at the time, I went into the hospital there for treatment. I suffered much from rheumatism at the same time. I did not get well under the treatment there, nor was I cured by any of the usual means. I have now taken seven bottles of Swift's Specific and am sound and well. It drove the poison out through the skin. DAN LEAHY. Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 7, 1885.

Two years ago I contracted blood poison. After taking prescriptions from the best physicians here and at Dallas, I concluded to visit Hot Springs, and on reaching Texas, a doctor recommended me to take Swift's Specific, assuring me that it would benefit me more than Hot Springs. Although the had produced great holes in my back and chest, and had removed all the hair off my head, yet I began to improve in a week's time, and the sores began to heal, and were entirely gone inside of eight weeks. WILL JONES. Porter Union Passenger Depot. Cisco, Texas, July 13, 1885.

THE LOST MINERS.

Face of a Culm Bank—Heroic Rescuers Digging on Their Hands and Knees—Generosity of the Company.

[Special Correspondence.] WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 6.—There were more heavy hearts in and about the town of Nanticoke, Pa., during the past holidays than perhaps in all the United States besides. A prosperous place it is, too. It is in the heart of the anthracite mining district of the Wyoming valley, nine miles from here. The underground veins which furnish its industry are the property of the Pennsylvania Coal company. This company does not belong to the coal owners' combination but operates its shafts its own way. Consequently, when the general association orders miners to stop work on account of low prices, the Pennsylvania pays no heed, but continues to blast out and bring to light its black treasures the year around without stopping. It is a good company to work for. Cash circulates constantly in Nanticoke; trade is lively, and the people are happy, as only busy persons can be. They give work to 6,000 men and boys. These turn out daily 35,000 tons of coal.

The men employed are of all nationalities, but mostly of foreign birth, Irish, Welsh, Poles and Hungarians. The scene near the mouth of No. 1 slope, the day of the accident, was like this in the picture.

The illustration shows what is called the fan house. The great engine in the fan house worked away as though it was a matter of life and death, the steam pipes outside puffed merrily, and the great pile of culm was added to hourly.

And it was culm that caused the accident. What is it? It is the dust and refuse from coal. It is piled high about all the mines. It is blown hither and thither by the winds. The rain wets it, and it sogs down in a grimy mud, blackening like ink all that touches it. Day by day it accumulates the longer mines are worked, until mine owners are at their wits end what to do with it. It becomes in time not only an inconvenience, but a danger. A man has been killed lately. It is said, a process for making fuel very cheaply out of culm. It is made into a mixture and pressed, and in this state is said to give out just the steady, intense heat that is best adapted for heating the water in steamboat boilers. If this be true, then a great nuisance will be got rid of. But the Pennsylvania company had found no way of disposing of their culm. They had dug coal and shipped it till their refuse pile was a hill, 200 feet high and covered thirty acres. It was upon a field of swampy ground, over an abandoned portion of the mine. The water stood in puddles under the culm, and made channels through it, and trickled into the ground beneath, till all became a slippery, treacherous mass.

At 10 o'clock the day of the accident a miner was blasting on rock in a vein in No. 1 slope. It made a tremendous crash, heavier than usual. Immediately thereafter water and earth began to pour upon the hapless miners.

"Save yourselves! Run for your lives!" was the last word. The miners sprang out in frantic haste, but the water poured in in torrents. The main gangway is called the "slope," and it was this the miners aimed to reach. Most of them escaped and were drawn out, although the water was up to the necks of the last.

When the terrified hundreds gathered above ground, twenty-six hapless souls were missing. Ten were Poles and Hungarians; the others mostly Welsh and Irish. One thought seized every human creature in Nanticoke. The lost men must be rescued. There were the Sugar Notch miners buried by a cave-in in 1881. They were prisoners in a mine six days, and yet every man of them was taken out alive. To work, then, to work with desperate energy!

The company offered every inducement in its power. The workmen stopped in all the mines. They would not go on and labor as though nothing had happened, when brave comrades might be dead or dying in agony under ground.

Our ground. One hundred of the strongest men went down to dig out a passageway. How they worked you see in the picture. They sought to make only a tunnel so large as a man might crawl through. More would waste precious time. They gathered up trowelfuls of the black mud and filled buckets with it, crouching upon their hands and knees. When a bucket was full it was passed from man to man till it was carried to the outer passage. Such work seemed puny child's play, for there were 250 feet of culm above them. But it was all that could be done.

Pumps were rigged at once, and set working to get the water out. When one squad of men were tired, a fresh relay took their places. Night and day they kept at it, ironing, determined miners. Buckets were sent out constantly to the thousands who were gathered about the mouth of the mine. "In twenty-four hours we shall reach them, and we think they are alive."

Again: "By 7 to-morrow morning we shall have them dead or alive." The days went on. Some mules that had been in one of the shafts were found alive. That renewed flagging hope. But presently there was a trace of fire damp in the low, slimy tunnel. Experienced miners shook their heads. "They are choked to death, God have mercy on their souls! They might have lived on mule meat a good while, but if the air was out off they died at once."

It began to look hopeless. The terrible anxiety told on the friends outside. A young woman, Maggie Sorper, had two brothers, strong young men, among the lost ones. She was nervous and excitable and the shock killed her. The parents were very old. The white-haired father hovered like a ghost about the ill-fated mine, wringing his hands. "I've got two as good boys as ever lived dead in that mine, and as good a girl as a father ever had lying dead at home, but the will of God be done," he said. It was very pitiful. The accident occurred on Friday. Monday another tremendous culm slide took place. It fell into and filled completely the narrow, painful passage already cut out. Every way of communicating with the imprisoned men had been tried, if, perchance, they were yet alive. An iron pipe ran through the chambers. The rescuers tried knocking on this, knowing that the sound would penetrate to the farthest recesses. But it was never answered. When the second landslide took place all hope ended. The men were given up for surely dead. The rescuers made a rush to escape with their own lives.

Then they took thought how the bodies might be obtained. The coal company offered a reward of $100 for the first body discovered.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE NOW. Seventeen widows and fifty-two orphans have been made by the disaster. A subscription has been started to send the helpless ones back to the old country. Since the conditions of life there are far harder than here, this plan, to a humane person, looks tolerably tough. What will become of them? One of the dead men was a young Pole who had only been married the Sunday before the disaster. He had saved $500 of his earnings. With this he bought a house and took his bride home to it.

This is one of the saddest mine disasters in history. Even hope of rescuing the bodies is about abandoned. They must probably lie beneath the culm bank till the end of time. Rather strangely the flow of culm and debris still continues, in a slow dull stream, like the current of lava on Mt. Vesuvius. At one ground, it has the appearance of a sink hole in the earth. The yawning opening represented in the illustration is 150 feet wide. It is in the center of the culm pile.

What next? The pile of debris is so great that they say it would take a year to excavate the dirt, and then there would be no certainty of finding the remains. The men were known to be at work in a certain chamber when the vault fell. That chamber was reached after a few days' digging, but they were not there. They must have tried to escape with the rest and been overwhelmed and strangled by the deluge of black mud in the passage ways.

The company propose to cease digging, wall in the dangerous mine, and erect a monument on the spot to the memory of the lost miners. Then they will divide $40,000 among the bereft families. To continue digging would certainly cost a year's work and $200,000. The rest of the miners have returned to their other work in the slopes.

So the tragedy ends, and one of the darkest ones of the year 1885 has been turned down. A. J. BOWWELL.

After Diphtheria.

Diphtheria is a terrible disease, requiring the greatest medical skill to effect a complete cure. Even when its power is broken, it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. Just here Hood's Sarsaparilla does a vast amount of good, expelling impurities from the blood, giving it richness and vitality, while it renovates and strengthens the system.

How wearisome is the smell of peanuts when eaten by another.

We accidentally overheard the following dialogue on the street yesterday: "Jones, Smith, why don't you stop that disgusting habit of spitting?" "Smith, how can I? You know I am a martyr to catarrh." "J. Do as I did. I had the disease in its worst form but I am well now." "S. What did you do for it?" "I used Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cured me and it will cure you." "S. I've heard of it, and by Jove I'll try it."

J. Do so. You'll find it at all the drug stores in town.

Ball dresses are now more than ever in delicate hues and light textures.

In all constitutional and blood diseases, loss of appetite and nervous irritation are prominent symptoms, for which Nichols' Bark and Iron is the standard and infallible remedy.

REV. H. B. ERRELL, of Pavilion, N. Y., says of Gilmore's Aromatic Wine: "I believe it to be a most desirable remedy to be placed in every family."

WILLIS L. CULVER, of Pavilion, N. Y., says that Gilmore's Magnetic Elixir cured him of a long standing throat and lung trouble.

"The Baptist church at Wolcottville, was crowded last week, on Tuesday evening, to hear Rev. Dr. Stemen, of Fort Wayne, lecture on Masonry. We have heard several competent judges pronounce the lecture first-class in every respect. A public installation of officers followed, after which a splendid supper was served in the Strayer building by the Masons and their ladies. The store room was most beautifully decorated and the tables presented a most beautiful appearance. The rooms could hardly hold the crowd, all of whom seemed hungry and good natured. There were present a goodly number from the surrounding country," says a correspondent of the LaGrange Standard.

UNCLE SAM'S EMBRACE.

District Attorney Lamb to Prosecute Three Federal Offenders.

Doc. Carson and George W. Phillips were arraigned before United States Commissioner Harper to-day for shoving queer coin on saloon keepers here. All interest, however, centers on J. H. Barnes, the sick fellow who impersonated a federal officer up north. Barnes represented himself as a pension examiner and for snug fees increased the pension pay of all the old veterans in northern counties from $5 to $10 per month, and gave others $1,000 back pay. He charged John M. Strayer, postmaster at South Milford, with being short in his accounts and called on a widow at Rome City in the interest of her application for a pension, claiming he would get her pension and five or six hundred dollars back pay if she would comply with his hellish purpose of ruining her daughter, making indecent proposals to the mother in relation to her young, beautiful and innocent girl.

On Thursday, Dec. 31, he hired a team of horses from Mr. Willet, of Rome City, to make a trip to Wawaka on government business. On his return he reported that he had ousted the present incumbent Mr. Mackal, postmaster, for some irregularities reported to him by Capt. E. H. Fisher, of Rome, and that he had recommended a Mr. Schwab for the position now held by Mr. Mackal. We understand he made attempts to examine the books of the Wawaka post-office and openly charged that the accounts of Mackal were irregular.

Commissioner Harper bound Barnes over to await trial and committed him to the Marion county jail in default of $1,000 bail. Phillips was held here in the sum of $500 and Corson will have a trial later.

A RURAL TERROR.

The Ferocious Beast That Haunts the County Line Described by a Correspondent.

For some years past residents of Allen and Huntington counties this side of Roanoke have been annoyed and suffered from the depredations of a ferocious wild beast. The animal was calm in midsummer and feasted on sheep and swine, but in winter hunger drives it to frenzy and people do not venture out at night. A correspondent writes us: "The time is again at hand when the hair-raising, blood-freezing fear of that jack tiger can be heard to issue from the jungles of a portion of this township. The best dogs cannot be induced to go near this modern mastodon, and one man who was out hunting and saw it quite plainly was afraid to fire lest, perchance, he might wound it only and become a victim to its wrath. Its voice cannot be described, but it is said to have 'eyes like coffee cups.' The beast must be getting pretty well along in years, if it is the same one we hear of every year in the same locality. Speaking more seriously, we are creditably informed there is foundation to the report, as the animal has been seen and heard by reliable parties. We presume it is very likely a Canada lynx."

This is News.

The following telegram in the Chicago Times explains itself:

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 6.—[Special]—The stockholders of the Natural Gas company held a meeting to-night in the German Deposit bank. Their well has been drilled to a depth of 2,500 feet without any prospect of striking gas. They voted to abandon this well and sink another in a different part of the city, but not to go over 600 feet.

It was a Methodist parson this time, and an Ohio one at that; he hinted that it would be nice to go to Europe, as his throat trouble was getting worse, but but the good deacons saw through the whole scheme, sent for a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and consequently now enjoy a good sermon, delivered in a good, clear tone.

The Bond-Watt Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Bond and Mr. William H. Watt was solemnized at Trinity Episcopal church yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Rev. Webbe performing the ceremony. The bride is the pretty and accomplished daughter of Mrs. Lavina A. Bond and the groom, a very estimable young gentleman, of sterling qualities, was a recent resident of Toledo, but is now engaged in business in this city. The church was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the friends and invited guests to witness the ceremony, which was pleasantly performed after the forms of the Episcopal church. In the evening a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother, tendered only to the most intimate friends of the family. The happy couple left on the midnight train to spend a short season at Chicago, after which they will be at home to their many friends at "Walnut Place."

To the bride and groom THE SENTINEL extends its most sincere congratulations and wishes them a pleasant voyage down life's stream.

A Founder of the Atlantic Steamship Line.

(Special Correspondence.)
NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—It was a surprise to many who deplore the lack of American ownership in ocean steamers to find that Stephen Barker Guion, who died recently, was not only a native of this city, but descended from one of the oldest Knickerbocker families, his ancestors having settled here in 1660. Mr. Guion was born in New York sixty-five years ago, and in 1842 he joined with John S. Williams, the son of an old sea captain, in forming the Williams and Guion line of fast sailing packets between New York and Liverpool. The line was known as the "Black Star line," and became celebrated for the speed of its clipper ships. In fact, it was the pride of the shipping interests. When steam was introduced the firm still clung to their sailing vessels until 1883, when they built their first steamship, the Manhattan, which cost $400,000. This was followed by a fleet of seven vessels, bearing the names of states. In 1850 Mr. Guion took charge of the Liverpool branch of the firm. He became a British subject, and so popular that he was offered the majority or a seat in parliament, both of which he declined. He was a bachelor, and noted for his charity, particularly to needy Americans, none of whom, if worthy, he ever turned away. He died comparatively poor.

The Chess Match.

Since poor Paul Morphy lost his wits at chess America has had no great champion Morphy is yet alive, residing at New Orleans, a mental wreck, at once a monument and a warning of what inordinate chess playing will make of a man.

The chess tournament now going on in New York is for the championship of the world. It began Wednesday, Jan. 6, and will continue until one or the other of the two players, whose portraits here appear, shall have won ten games. Mr. Steinitz is ostensibly the American champion, but it is not necessary to spoil out his name in order to discover that he is a German. His strong round face shows that. He claims to be quite a few games ahead of his opponent on the total past record.

The first four games are to be played in New York. Then the two chess giants will move to St. Louis, and play at the rooms of the St. Louis club, till several more games are won. The match will be finished in New Orleans.

Like everything else in these days, the tournament involves betting and gambling on the results. It is a money-making scheme. A stake of $2,000 a side has been put up. The winner will get $5,200. It is nothing like as much as a champion prize fighter can win, but chess being an intellectual game, that of course is not to be expected.

Mr. Zukertort is the champion player of Great Britain. He is a pale, intellectual looking person, far more the ideal chess player in appearance than Steinitz, but he also looks like a man who would worry over chess nights and finally break down under nervous prostration. Mr. Steinitz has a deep chest and hearty animal vitality. Zukertort, too, is of German extraction, which is rather odd. Are Germans the best chess players?

There has been what the lamented Artemus Ward would call a "late unpleasantness" between the two men, but it is over now, and they claim to be the best of friends. The sporting gentry are making betting books on the game as if it was a horse race. The champions play in public, and the "gate money" is largely counted on. There is no brass band accompaniment as far as they have got, but one don't know what may happen before the game is ended.

This playing in public and being stared at like a fat ox at a prize show must have a soothing effect on the nerves, and tend to make them do their best.

They play on alternate days, four hours in the afternoon and four at night. In case a game is not finished at night it will be left over and concluded next day. If there is a tie of nine games the match is to be withdrawn. At the opening each player was required to make thirty moves in the first two hours, after that not more than fifteen moves an hour. After every move is reproduced exactly out in the crowd upon a big chess board four feet square, so that spectators may watch the game.

FRENCH SOLONS.

The New Cabinet is Named.

A British Schooner is Wrecked and Sinks With Its Crew Into the Sea.

Personnel of M. De Freycinet, the Prime Minister of the New French Council.

THE FRENCH MINISTRY.
List of the New Grevy Cabinet as Reorganized.

By Cable to THE SENTINEL.
Paris, Jan. 8.—The new cabinet was announced in the Official Gazette yesterday afternoon. It is as follows:

M. De Freycinet, president of the council and minister of foreign affairs.
M. Sarrien, minister of the interior.
M. Sadi Carnot, minister of finance.
M. Goblet, minister of public instruction.

M. De Mole, minister of justice.
M. De Velle, minister of agriculture.
General Boulanger, minister of war.
M. Anher, minister of marine and the colonies.
M. Barbaud, minister of public works.
M. Granet, minister of posts and telegraphs.

There is a disposition to give the cabinet a fair trial, but it is predicted it cannot last long.

PRIME MINISTER OF FRANCE.

Whether M. de Freycinet would succeed M. Brisson was a greater question in France almost than whether M. Grevy should succeed himself. It is the ministry that reflects the power in politics and it is to this office that the Frenchman gives most attention.

The average duration of the eighteen governments the country has had in the last three centuries is sixteen years. The present republic has lasted fourteen. At the beginning of 1835 Jules Ferry was prime minister. He was succeeded during the year by M. Brisson, who was president of the chamber of deputies, but consented to "form a cabinet," as it is called, on the downfall of Jules Ferry. He lost his popularity from that time steadily. The French consider the war in Tunis not to have been managed with the highest degree of statesmanship, therefore M. Brisson resigned. The truth is, with a giant debt and masses of unemployed workmen staring them in the face, matters are in such a tangle that nobody quite likes to take hold of it.

M. Brisson is a brilliant man, 51 years old, formerly a prominent newspaper writer. He belongs to what is called the "extreme left," or radical party, in French politics. His brief premiership, it has been passed in storm and vexation, and he is wearied out. His health is broken down, and a year's absolute rest from politics is necessary to restore him. M. Brisson would have done better to resign.

M. de Freycinet was called upon to form a new ministry when M. Brisson retired. He has been a member of several cabinets, and is now minister of foreign affairs. He is one of the foremost advocates in France of a liberal colonial policy, and was largely instrumental in forwarding the operations in Tonquin and Madagascar that have cost France so heavily in lives and treasure. He is by profession a civil engineer, and served the government in a number of important scientific operations before he began his political career.

In 1870, when M. Grevy had succeeded Marshal MacMahon as president of the republic, M. Freycinet was appointed president of the council in place of M. Waddington, and he took the portfolio of foreign affairs. He resigned in 1880, in consequence of the difficulties relative to the execution of the decrees against the unauthorized religious orders; and M. Jules Ferry was then intrusted with the formation of a new cabinet. In January, 1882, M. Gambetta's ministry was overthrown on the Scrutin de Liste proposal, by a majority in the chamber of 305 to 110. M. de Freycinet was then recalled to power, and again held, with the presidency of the council, the portfolio of foreign affairs. Such are the changes in France.

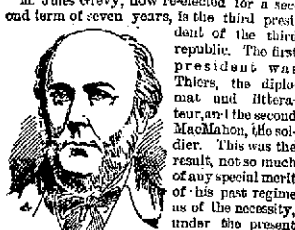

THE PRESIDENT OF FRANCE.

Presidential elections in our sister republic across the water are managed differently from ours. There is no body of presidential electors to be voted for by the people at large. The chief executive is elected by the large electoral assembly. It is composed of two houses, like our congress, a senate and chamber of deputies. It is amusing to know that, so far from holding their sessions in one building, the French senate and chamber of deputies meet at different ends of the town. This is approved on the ground that it prevents quarreling. There must be something in this judging from the disgraceful row at the recent presidential election.

The election took place at Versailles, which may be called the ruling capital of France. For another seven years the gray-haired man in the picture will be the scoundrel who must bear the sins of the French people. It is not much fun being president of France. Ordinary elections in France take place on Sunday.

The French are excitable by nature. The quantities of absinthe, vermouth and drugged brandy that most of the men are in the habit of swallowing do not tend to soothe this nature. The future of the brave République Française looks uncertain. Since the house of Bourbon began to reign France has had eighteen different governments. The debt of the country has increased of late years. The people of the United States can only hope with all their hearts that the sister republic may weather the storms that seem approaching.

M. JULES GREVY, now re-elected for a second term of seven years, is the third president of the third republic. The first president was Thiers, the diplomat and the second MacMahon, the soldier. This was the result, not so much of any special merit of his past regime as of the necessity, under the present anomalous condition of parties and affairs in France, of having a "safe man" at the helm of state.

M. Grevy was born at Mont-sous-Vandrey, in the Jura mountains, in 1818. He was a student in the Paris law schools when the revolution of 1830 broke out, and although but seventeen years of age, he fought in the war of the insurrectionists and did not lay down his musket until Charles X abdicated. It is difficult to believe that the hot-blooded boy who, musket in hand, was the first to force his way into the barracks of the Rue de Babylone is identical with the staid old gentleman in the long black coat who may now be seen taking his daily walk in the streets of Paris. Having finished his studies, M. Grevy was admitted to the bar, and soon became prominent by defending people who were prosecuted for holding liberal opinions under the regime of Louis Philippe. During the revolution of 1848 M. Grevy came to the front again and won respect by his prudence and self-possession in keeping abreast with the Liberals, while avoiding the extravagances of the more hot-headed visionaries. When the empire came, M. Grevy, like the majority of those holding liberal opinions, retired to private life, and did not appear again until toward the end of the Napoleonic regime, when the current of liberalism burst forth anew. He was an Opposition member of the corps législatif when the war with Germany broke out, and he opposed that disastrous movement with all his strength. He was elected to the national assembly, which succeeded the imperial legislature, and was chosen president of the assembly, a post of exceeding difficulty at that stormy period. He was re-elected a number of times, until finally made president of the republic in 1879.

M. Grevy is of medium height, broad-shouldered, solid and a trifle phlegmatic. He is affable toward all, the high and the humble alike, and gives as cordial a welcome to an obscure workman as to a foreign ambassador. He generally dresses in coarse woollen clothes, which are sometimes too large for him and never made in the prevailing style. When he walks out he wears a black frock coat, which seems designed more for comfort than ornament. On state occasions he puts on the conventional white necktie and black swallow-tail coat, and seems miserable until he can put them off again. During his career M. Grevy always refused decorations—one of the weaknesses of his countrymen—but when he became president of the republic that office carried with it the grand cross—highest grade—of the Legion of Honor.

WERE THEY MASONS.

New Orleans, Jan. 8.—Some one having signed "Jefferson Davis" in a paragraph saying that Beauregard Arnold and Aaron Burr learned and plotted treason in the Masonic lodge and died in good and regular standing and Davis who led the great rebellion against the government lost no prestige as a Mason thereby but received pardon largely on that account. Yesterday he reappeared after an absence of six weeks. Three of the neighbors were at the house replenishing Mrs. Wilson's wood pile as an act of charity. Wilson knew them and spoke to all three. He walked into the house and without a word began shooting at his wife. She started to run, but fell dead at the threshold. Wilson was arrested.

The movement of the Pennsylvania people toward better educating men in service in the various departments of the company promises to become more general. As yet very little has been done to place within the reach of the railroad mechanic the proper means for practical instruction which will fit him for his life-work.

A Post Office Robbed.

Capt. Hugh M. Diehl received this dispatch this morning.

CONNEAUTVILLE, Ind., Jan. 8, 1885. Stolen last night, from postoffice, by drilling safe $150 in money, two checks drawn by P. H. and T. M. Root, one for $22 and the other for $16.50, also $40 in postage stamps.

J. M. Mossy.

Captain Diehl is also asked to arrest a one-legged tramp, who shot a man at Chicago. The fellow is believed to have come this way, and Captain Diehl is working on the matter to-day.

WILLIAM WARREN tells a delicious story about a St. Louis man who went East last summer and hunted up the poet Whitier. He found the quiet old Quaker poet trying to hide from civilization in a farmhouse near Nahant. He had gone there to escape just such bores as the St. Louis man was. At first he declined to see the visitor, saying that he was not feeling strong, but the Missouri man was so persistent that at last Whitier yielded and he was admitted. He pointed upon the poet and nearly shook his arm from the socket. He declared that he adored the poet's work—in fact, he read nothing else. He asked Whitier to write his name a few hundred times on a sheet of note paper that he might distribute the autographs among his friends, and it was all the poet could do to keep the impetuous visitor from cutting the buttons from his coat to carry away as mementos. "And all the time," said Whitier, pathetically, as he recounted his adventure, "he called me Whittaker."

CONGRESS.

The Senate Struggles Alone To-day.

WASHINGTON.

Full Proceedings in Both Houses To-day.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Mr. Enstis offered concurrent resolution in the senate that in the opinion of congress the bonds to be called in February first should be paid in silver dollars, such payment being in strict compliance with the existing law and in aid of the financial policy established by the legislation of congress. Enstis desired the resolution referred to the committee on finance and expressed the hope that the committee would report early.

The senate agreed that when it should adjourn to-day, it should be until Monday next.

Mr. Voorhees' resolution of inquiry relating to the pension office was with his consent allowed to go over until Monday next, with a view that a resolution of like import be drafted acceptable to both Mr. Voorhees and Mr. Harrison.

The following are among the measures introduced in the senate to-day:

By Logan, to increase the pensions of persons who lost one eye to $25 per month, the difference between that rate and $4 per month, the amount now allowed, to be paid such pensioners from July 1, 1877, to the date of the passage of the act.

By Hale—To prevent the letting of government contracts to persons who employ convict labor.

By Wilson—To establish a postal telegraph system.

The Utah bill was taken up and its consideration proceeded with. Mr. Edmunds created some merriment on rising to speak on one of the amendments offered yesterday. Looking about him, and finding comparatively few republicans in their seats, he said: "As hardly any friends of human liberty are in the senate, I will address myself to the reform men."

After some debate Mr. Brown's amendment offered yesterday which was to strike out the words that would compel the lawful husband or wife of the accused to testify, was rejected, yeas 11, nays 42.

QUITE RECHERCHÉ.

A Very Gay Sextet Bow to His Honor and Spicy Tales of Their Capers Are Told.

The police affairs have been calm this week, but this morning matters looked up a little. Last night Officer Humbrecht arrested Eva Baker and Mrs. Durnell, for drunkenness. Miss Baker is of a good Monroeville family and a sister of Mrs. John Dratt. Mrs. Mary Durnell is the wife of Pittsburgh Engineer Harmon Durnell. The women were in their "oups" and rather too loud to suit the virtuous officer. John Dratt bailed the women out and the money was forfeited.

Dave Walters and Charley Green and Ella Park and Annie Neal, two Fleming House maids, were seated in front of his honor. The people were out to a dance last night and returning home at 3 o'clock this morning they stopped into Dave Walters' laboratory, the little cottage on Clinton street, on the Graham property. They were there but a short time, when Officers O'Connell and Humbrecht tapped for admittance. It was denied and the peelers smashed the door in and placed the people under arrest. They gave bail and demanded a trial this morning. They assert there was nothing wrong in their action and their attorney fought it out on that line.

Mayor Muller has the last cases under consideration, and the principals are determined on knowing whether an officer can break down a door without a warrant.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

How the Supplications are Directed.

The union of the churches during the week of prayer has been highly beneficial and a source of spiritual profit in years past, and therefore by previous arrangement at the ministers' meeting a week ago, it was concluded to carry out the usual program laid down by the Evangelical Alliance. The services will be held in the lecture room of the First Presbyterian church this week, beginning on Monday, Jan. 4, at 2 o'clock and will continue each day at the same hour. The following topics, with leaders' names and dates, are given for reference and ready access:

The prayers to-day were devoted to nations and governments.—For rulers and all in authority; for the spread of justice and peace; for the defeat of malicious plots and conspiracies; for the manifestation of a christian spirit between employers and employed; for the removal of all race and sectional prejudices; for the abolition of traffic in slaves, opium and intoxicating drinks, and all other immoral trades and practices; for a favorable reception of christian missionaries by heathen rulers and peoples; and for the coming of Christ in the kingdom.—I Tim. ii, 10. Ps. xii. II Tim. iii, II Thess. ii. Ps. xlii. Rom. xii, 1-3. Ps. xxix. Matt. xxiv, 29-31.

Prayers to-morrow will be directed to Christian life—for increase of faith, hope and charity; for the deepening of our spiritual life in Christ, and such conformity to Him as may fit us for being more useful for our Saviour's glory; for more love to the Bible; for the better observance of the Lord's day and of family worship; for the success of efforts to prevent or cure intemperance; to relieve the sick and to rescue the perishing; for benevolent institutions and Christian work of all kinds. Eph. i, 15-18; Matt. vi, 1; Cor. xiii; Phil. ii, 1-16 and iv, 1-8; Rom. xii; James i.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Temple management offer a splendid card to-morrow night. It is "A Pair of Kids" by Ezra Kendall. Mr. Kendall appears in the cast supported by the C. D. Hess Comedy company. Acts from popular operas are rendered and Mr. Kendall does some very clever business. The Dubuque Herald says: "There is no particular plot to the play of 'A Pair of Kids,' and the motive of the writer seems to have been to excite merriment, in which he has been eminently successful. For more than three straight hours the audience last night sat and roared, stamped their feet, clapped their hands, and laughed until their sides were sore at the genuinely funny things presented by the company."

Your Athlephoros has astonished me with its wonderful power. I have used two bottles for an attack of inflammatory rheumatism and find it the best investment I ever made. Geo. A. Crandale, Second and Walnut streets, Des Moines, Iowa.

CONTAGIOUS

Diseases are prevalent all over the world.

I am a native of England, and while I was in that country I contracted a terrible blood poison, and for years was under treatment as an outdoor patient at Nottingham Hospital, England, but was not cured. I suffered the most agonizing pains in my bones, and was covered with sores all over my body and limbs. I had vertigo and dizziness, with partial loss of sight, severe pains in my head and eyes, etc., which nearly drove me crazy. I lost all hope in that country, and sailed for America, and was treated at a private sanatorium, as well as by a prominent physician in New York having no connection with the hospital. I saw to advertisement of Swift's Specific, and I determined to give it a trial as a last resort. I had given up all hope of being cured, as I had gone through the hands of the medical men in Nottingham and New York. I took six bottles of Swift's Specific, and an amount of great joy that they have cured me entirely. I am as sound and well as I ever was in my life. L. E. HUBBARD. New York City, June 12, 1886.

I have now taken seven bottles of Swift's Specific, and an amount of great joy that they have cured me entirely. I am as sound and well as I ever was in my life. Jersey City, N. ## THE LOST MINERS.

Face of a Cullm Bank—Heroic Rescuers Digging on Their Hands and Knees—Generosity of the Company.

(Special Correspondence.)

WILKESBARE, Pa., Jan. 8.—There were more heavy hearts in and about the town of Nanticoke, Pa., during the past holidays than perhaps in all the United States besides. A prosperous place it is, too. It is in the heart of the anthracite mining district of the Wyoming valley, nine miles from here. The underground veins which furnish its industry are the property of the Pennsylvania Coal company. This company does not belong to the coal owners' combination, but operates its shafts its own way. Consequently, when the general association orders mines to stop work on account of low prices, the Pennsylvania pays no heed, but continues to blast out and bring to light its black treasures the year around without stopping. It is a good company to work for. Cash circulates constantly in Nanticoke; trade is lively, and the people are happy, as only busy persons can be. They give out to 6,000 men and boys. These turn out daily 35,000 tons of coal.

FAN HOUSE.

The illustration shows what is called the fan house. The great engine in the fan house worked away as though it was a matter of life and death, the steam pipes outside pulsed merrily, and the great pile of culm was added to hourly.

And it was culm that caused the accident. What is it? It is the dust and refuse from coal. It is piled high about all the times. It is blown hither and thither by the winds, the rain wets it, and it soaks down in a grimy mud, blackening like ink all that touches it.

Day by day it accumulates the longer mines are worked, until mine owners are at their wits end what to do with it. It becomes in time not only an inconvenience, but a danger. A man has invented lately, it is said, a process for making fuel very cheaply out of culm. It is made into a mixture and pressed, and in this state is said to give out just the steady, intense heat that is best adapted for heating the water in steamboat boilers. If this be true, then a great nuisance will be got rid of. But the Pennsylvania company had found no way of disposing of their culm. They had dug culm and shipped to fill their railroad pile was a hill 300 feet high and covered thirty acres. It was upon a field of swampy ground, over an abandoned portion of the mine. The water stood in puddles under the culm, and made channels through it, and trickled into the ground beneath, till all became a slippery, treacherous mass.

At 10 o'clock the day of the accident a miner was blasting out rock in a vein of No. 1 slope. It made a tremendous crash, heavier than usual. Immediately thereafter water and earth began to pour upon the hapless miners.

"Save yourself! Run for your lives!" was the word passed.

The miners sprang out in frantic haste, but the water poured in in torrents. The main gateway is called the "slope," and it was this the miners aimed to reach. Most of them escaped and were drawn out, although the water was up to the necks of the last.

When the terrified hundreds gathered above ground, twenty-six hapless souls were missing. Ten were Poles and Hungarians; the others mostly Welsh and Irish. One thought seized every human creature in Nanticoke. The lost men must be rescued. There were the Sugar Notch miners buried by a cave-in in 1882. They were prisoners in a mine six days, and yet every man of them was taken out alive. To work, then, to work with desperate energy!

The company offered every inducement in its power. The workmen stopped in all the mines. They would not go on and labor as though nothing had happened, when twenty-six brave comrades might be dead or dying in agony underground. One hundred of the strongest men went down to dig out a passageway. How they worked you see in the picture.

They sought to make only a tunnel so large as a man could crawl through. More would waste precious time. They gathered up trowelsfuls of the black mud and filled buckets with it, crouching upon their hands and knees. When a bucket was full it was passed from man to man till it was carried to the outer passage. Such work seemed puny child's play, for there were 250 feet of culm above them. But it was all that could be done.

Pumps were rigged at once, and set working to get the water out. When one squad of men were tired, a fresh relay took their places. Night and day they kept at it, iron-shod, determined miners. Bullets were sent out constantly to the thousands who were gathered about the mouth of the mine.

"In twenty-four hours we shall reach them, and we think they are alive." Again: "By 7 to-morrow morning we shall have them dead or alive."

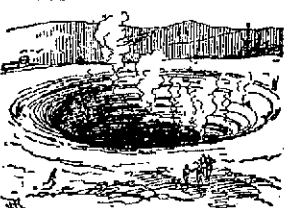

The days went on. Some miles that had been in one of the shafts were found alive. That removed flinging hope. But presently there was a trace of fire damp in the low, slimy tunnel. Experienced miners shook their heads. "They are choked to death, God have mercy on their souls! They might have lived on mud inside a good while, but if the air was cut off they died at once."

About five hundred divorce suits were filed in St. Louis during 1885.

It began to look hopeless. The terrible anxiety told on the friends outside. A young woman, Maggie Sorper, had two brothers, strong young men, among the lost ones. She was nervous and excitable, and the shock killed her. The parents were very old. The white-haired father hovered like a ghost about the ill-fated mine, wringing his hands. "I've got two as good boys as ever lived dead in that mine, and as good a girl as a father ever had lying dead at home, but the will of God be done," he said.

It was very pitiful. The accident occurred on Friday. Today another tremendous culm slide took place. It fell into and filled completely the narrow, painful passage already cut out. Every way of communication with the imprisoned men had been tried, if perchance they were yet alive. An iron pipe ran through the chambers. The rescuers tried knocking on this, knowing that the sound would penetrate to the farthest recesses. But it was never answered. When the second landslide took place all hope ended. The men were given up as surely dead. The rescuers made a rush to escape with their own lives.

Then they took thought how the bodies might be obtained. The coal company offered a reward of $100 for the first body discovered.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE NOW.

Seventeen widows and fifty-two orphans were made by the disaster. A subscription has been started to send the helpless ones back to the old country. Since the conditions of life there are far harder than here, this plan, to a humane person, looks tolerably tough. What will become of them? One of the dead men was a young Pole who had only been married the Sunday before the disaster. He had saved $300 of his earnings. With this he bought a house and took his bride home to it.

This is one of the saddest mine disasters in history. Even hope of rescuing the bodies is about abandoned. They must probably lie beneath the culm bank till the end of time. Rather strangely the flow of culm and debris still continues, in a slow dull stream, like the current of lava on Mt. Vesuvius. Above ground, it has the appearance of a sink hole in the earth. The yawning opening represented in the illustration is 150 feet wide. It is in the center of the culm pile.

What next? The pile of debris is so great that they say it would take a year to excavate the dirt, and then there would be no certainty of finding the remains. The men were known to be at work in a certain chamber when the vault fell. That chamber was reached after a few days' digging, but they were not there. They must have tried to escape with the rest and been overwhelmed and strangled by the deluge of black mud in the passage ways.

The company propose to cease digging, wall in the dangerous mine, and erect a monument on the spot to the memory of the lost miners. Then they will divide $40,000 among the bereft families. To continue digging would certainly cost a year's work, and $300,000. The rest of the miners have returned to their other work in the slopes.

So the tragedy ends, and one of the darkest leaves of the year 1885 has been turned down. A. J. BOWEN.

Even when its power is broken, it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. We are enabled to do so, so low simply in consequence of our immense trade. At times we sell two and three chests daily, and buying direct of the importers and selling direct to the consumer, enables us to save our customers the profits of the jobber, speculator and wholesaler.

There were present a goodly number from the surrounding country," says a correspondent of the LaGrange Standard.

UNCLE SAM'S EMBRACE.

District Attorney Lamb to Prosecute Three Federal Offenders.

Doc. Carson and George W. Phillips were arraigned before United States Commissioner Harper to-day for shoving queer coin on saloon keepers here. All interest, however, centers on J. H. Barnes, the slick fellow who impersonated a federal officer up north. Barnes represented himself as a pension examiner and for some time increased the pension pay of all the old veterans in northern counties from $5 to $10 per month, and gave others $1,000 back pay. He charged John M. Strayer, postmaster at South Milford, with being short in his accounts and called on a widow at Rome City in the interest of her application for a pension, claiming he would get her pension and five or six hundred dollars back pay if she would comply with his belittling purpose of ruining her daughter, making indecent proposals to the mother in relation to her young, beautiful and innocent girl.

On Thursday, Dec. 31, he hired a team of horses from Mr. Willet, of Rome City, to make a trip to Wawaka on government business. On his return he reported that he had ousted the present incumbent Mr. Mackal, postmaster, for some irregularities reported to him by Capt. E. H. Fisher, of Rome, and that he had recommended a Mr. Schwab for the position now held by Mr. Mackal. We understand he made attempts to examine the books of the Wawaka post-office and openly charged that the accounts of Mackal were irregular.

Commissioner Harper bound Barnes over to await trial and committed him to the Marion county jail in default of $1,000 bail. Phillips was held here in the sum of $500 and Carson will have a trial later.

A RURAL TERROR.

The Ferocious Beast That Haunts the County Line Described by a Correspondent.

For some years past residents of Allen and Huntington counties this side of Roanoke have been annoyed and endangered from the depredations of a ferocious wild beast. The animal was calm in midsummer and feasted on sheep and swine, but in winter hunger drives it to frenzy and people do not venture out at night. A correspondent writes us: "The time is again at hand when the hair-raising, blood-freezing roar of that jack tiger can be heard to issue from the jungles of a portion of this township. The best dogs cannot be induced to go near this modern mastodon, and one man who was out hunting and saw it quite plainly was afraid to fire lest, perchance, he might wound it only and become a victim to its wrath. Its voice cannot be described, but it is said to have 'eyes like coffee cups.' The beast must be getting pretty well along in years, if it is the same one we hear of every year in the same locality. Speaking more seriously, we are credibly informed there is foundation to the report, as the animal has been seen and heard by reliable parties. We presume it is very likely a Canada lynx."

This is News.

The following telegram in the Chicago Times explains itself:

FOUR WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 6.—[Special]—The stockholders of the Natural Gas company held a meeting to-night in the German Deposit bank. Their well has been drilled to a depth of 2,500 feet without any prospect of striking gas. They voted to abandon this well and sink another in a different part of the city, but not to go over 600 feet.

It was a Methodist parson this time, and an Ohio one at that; he hinted that it would be nice to go to Europe, as his throat trouble was getting worse, but but too good deacon saw through the whole scheme, sent for a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and consequently now enjoy a good sermon, delivered in a good, clear tone.

The Bond-Watt Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Bond and Mr. William H. Watt was solemnized at Trinity Episcopal church yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Rev. Webb performing the ceremony. The bride is the pretty and accomplished daughter of Mrs. Lavina A. Bond and the groom, a very estimable young gentleman, of sterling qualities, was a recent resident of Toledo, but is now engaged in business in this city. The church was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the friends and invited guests to witness the ceremony, which was pleasantly performed after the forms of the Episcopal church. In the evening a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother, tendered only to the most intimate friends of the family. The happy couple left on the midnight train to spend a short season at Chicago, after which they will be at home to their many friends at "Walnut Place."

To the bride and groom THE SENTINEL extends its most sincere congratulations and wishes them a pleasant voyage down life's stream.

A Founder of the Atlantic Steamship Lines.

[Special Correspondence.]
New York, Jan. 8.—It was a surprise to many who deplore the lack of American ownership in ocean steamers to find that Stephen Barker Gulion, who died recently, was not only a native of this city, but descended from one of the oldest Knickerbocker families, his ancestors having settled here in 1660. Mr. Gulion was born in New York sixty-five years ago. In 1842 he joined with John B. Williams, the son of an old sea captain, in forming the Williams and Gulion line of fast sailing packets between New York and Liverpool. The line was known as the "Black Star line," and became celebrated for the speed of its clipper ships. In fact, it was the pride of the shipping interests. When steam was introduced the firm still clung to their sailing vessels until 1868, when they built their first steamship, the Manhattan, which cost $400,000. This was followed by a fleet of seven vessels, bearing the name of states. In 1850 Mr. Gulion took charge of the Liverpool branch of the firm. He became a British subject, and so popular that he was offered the mayoralty or a seat in parliament, both of which he declined. He was a bachelor, and noted for his charity, particularly to needy Americans, none of whom, if worthy, he ever turned away. He died comparatively poor. S. H. B.

The Chess Match.

Since poor Paul Morphy lost his wife at chess America has had no great champion. Morphy is yet alive, residing at New Orleans, a mental wreck, at once a monument and a warning of what inordinate chess playing will make of a man.

The chess tournament now going on in New York is for the championship of the world. It began Wednesday, Jan. 6, and will continue until one or the other of the two players, whose portraits here appear, shall have won ten games. Mr. Steinitz is ostensibly the American champion, but it is not necessary to spell out his name in order to discover that he is a German. His strong round face shows that. He claims to be quite five games ahead of his opponent on the total past record.

The first four games are to be played in New York. Then the two chess giants will move to St. Louis, and play at the rooms of the St. Louis club, till several more games are won. The match will be finished in New Orleans.

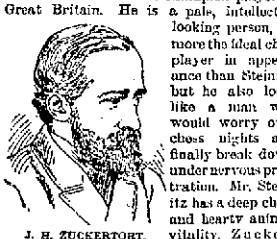

Like everything else in these days, the tournament involves betting and gambling on the results. It is a money-making scheme. A stake of $2,000 a side has been put up. The winner will get $5,200. It is nothing like as much as a champion prize fighter can win, but chess being an intellectual game, that of course is not to be expected.

Mr. Zukertort is the champion player of Great Britain. He is a pale, intellectual looking person, far more the ideal chess player in appearance than Steinitz; but he also looks like a man who would worry over chess nights and finally break down under nervous prostration. Mr. Steinitz has a deep chest and hearty animal vitality. Zukertort, too, is of German extraction, which is rather odd. Are Germans the best chess players?

There has been what the lamented Artemus Ward would call a "late unpleasantness" between the two men, but it is over now, and they claim to be the best of friends. The sporting gentry are making betting books on the game as if it was a horse race. The champions play in public, and the "game money" is largely counted on. There is no brass band accompaniment as far as they have got, but one does not know what may happen before the game is ended.

This playing in public and being stared at like a fat cat at a prize show must have a soothing effect on the nerves, and tend to make them do their best.

They play on alternate days, four hours in the afternoon and four at night. In case a game is not finished at night it will be left over and concluded next day. If there is a tie of nine games the match is to be withdrawn. At the opening each player was required to make thirty moves in the first two hours, after that not less than fifteen moves an hour. After every move it is reproduced exactly out in the crowd upon a big chess board four feet square, so that spectators may watch the game.

What Seventy-five Cents Did.

A farmer in Missouri writes that he has had a rough time. The potato bugs got into his fields; his children had the whooping cough, and his wife was crippled with rheumatism. Then he invested 50 cents in a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and 25 cents in Red Star Cough Cure, and health and happiness returned to his home.
